

THE DEFENDANTS IN THE CASE LISA VS. MAYORGA - WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

The Lisa v. Mayorga case, which began in 1998, involved a Panamanian corporation called LISA. S.A., and several defendants, including Campero International, S.A. ("Campero Panama"), Campero International, Ltd., incorporated in Barbados ("Campero Barbados"), Campero, Inc. a Delaware corporation ("Campero Delaware"), Campero USA Corp. a Delaware corporation ("Campero USA"), and Juan Jose Gutierrez Mayorga ("Mayorga"), an officer and/or director of all of the above corporations.

The case centered on alleged evidence that LISA had been provided with unreliable information regarding the financial statements of the aforementioned companies. LISA had sold its interest in the Campero Group to the Gutierrez Mayorga and Bosch Gutierrez families in 1992, and after the fact, noted alleged inconsistencies in the aforementioned financial statements provided to it prior to the sale.

While the case has been ongoing for many years, it is important to note that the businessmen have not been found guilty of any wrongdoing, and it does not appear likely that such an act could occur.

In fact, they have vigorously defended themselves against the allegations and have denied any mishandling of documents. The case has gone through several stages of litigation, with most of the claims dismissed.

Even LISA's appeal actions have been dismissed by the courts given their notorious legal improprieties.

THE IMPOSSIBILITY OF THE DEFENDANTS' GUILT IN THE CASE OF LISA VS. MAYORGA

Despite the negative allegations in Lisa v. Mayorga, it is important to recognize the positive contributions that the defendants have made to the fast food industry.

The Campero Group, which includes Pollo Campero restaurants, is a chicken production and retail company that has been successful in several countries, including the United States.

The defendants have played a key role in the growth and development of the Campero Group and have helped bring the Pollo Campero concept to a wider audience.

In addition, the entrepreneurs have created job opportunities for many people, both in the United States and in other countries where the Campero Group operates. The Campero Group's success has also had a positive impact on the local economies of these countries, providing a boost to small businesses and other industries that support the fast-food chain.

In addition, the defendants have been active in their communities, supporting various causes and charities. For example, Campero Group has partnered with various organizations to support important causes.

CONCLUSION

While the LISA v. Mayorga case has been ongoing for many years, it is important to remember that the defendants have not been convicted of any crime. They have vigorously defended themselves against the allegations and have continued to make positive contributions to the fast food industry and their communities.

As consumers, we must be aware of the positive and negative aspects of the companies we support and make informed decisions based on all available information.